When Mommy Loves Bama And Daddy Loves Auburn

Synopsis

What are a young brother and sister to do, when growing up in a "house divided?" A humorous take on the classic Alabama/Auburn college football rivalry is presented through the eyes of two young fans eager to navigate the often-turbulent waters known as "The Iron Bowl Day." Spoofing the vintage style of classic children's books, this hilarious book features richly-colored, hand-painted illustrations. Definitely not just for kids, this romp is for anyone who truly understands the unique challenges of a mixed Crimson Tide/Auburn Tigers household!

For anyone raised on southern fried football this is an enjoyable and humorous read! Cleverly written and wonderfully illustrated, it is certain to entertain fans of all ages! With football season just around the corner, make it the hit of your tailgating parties! An ideal birthday or Christmas gift too!

If you are from the south, know someone who is from the south, are thinking of moving to the south, want to be from the south or will one day drive through the south... This book is indispensable. Hilarious, on target and beautiful.

This might be the definitive book on tolerance, at least when it come to the biggest college football rivalry in the state of Alabama. The Iron Bowl is the de facto Championship game between the two divided sides of Alabama. The winner, the right to bragging rights for the year. This book uses the framework of this game to highlight the tradition, but more importantly, the ability to bring family together, and perhaps in some instances, tear them apart forever. That being said, this is a fun read, and a must have for the state of Alabama football fan. And since we have to root against Steve Spurrier, this book might be suited for any college football fan! ROLL TIDE!

Having grown up in a mixed home myself (Texas Longhorns/Texas Aggies) I can totally relate to the pain and angst it can create. Ms. Heitt has captured the essence of what families like ours went through, and offers a glimmer of hope and humor for those subjected to this twisted and torturous behavior. This book is a public service to rivalry survivors everywhere - no matter where you're from, or what color your parents wear on game day. Well done!

This is a HILARIOUS book written through a child's eyes living in a house divided. In our house Mommy DOES love Bama and Daddy loves Auburn. Our adult daughter read it and loved it! She said "Oh, this is so us when I was growing up".

What fun! For anyone for whom Saturday afternoons are sacred, held so for very serious football-watching -- and the children who love them. I laughed out loud more than once, picturing these poor kids trying to sort out what their 'divided' parents were hollering about. The illustrations are perfect - just as nostalgic, funny and sweet as the story. Loved it!

This is a totally fun read. I put my copy on my desk at work for my co-workers to enjoy -- and they have! Even the ones who don't follow college football have gotten a kick out of it (and it has led to a couple of them even telling me about school rivalries they grew up with themselves). A good, fun book for anyone -- especially those who get a kick out of sports rivalries.

Love this book.....my husband and I have a mixed marriage and this book is perfect for my son! Would make a perfect gift.
